The members of the board of county commissioners are pleased with the results from the agricultural exhibit made for Weber county at the fair and state that with an appropriation for next year at a time when preparations for an exhibit can be made, Weber county should be the banner county of the state at the fair.

There was but little time to collect agricultural products for the recent fair, but by putting in extra time and exercising good judgment, county horticultural inspector R. N. Rasmussen of North Ogden and George Folkman, court house custodian, gathered exhibits, the result being that Weber county took first prize for its display of all kinds of fruits, and many individual prizes were awarded Weber county growers.

The Weber county exhibits brought $103 in prizes and the prize was light. These prizes will be distributed to the individual exhibitors during the week and on next Monday Mr. Rasmussen will make his official report to the board.

Mr. Rasmussen states that he had on exhibition 60 baskets of Concord grapes, 49 crates of peaches, 15 crates of tender grapes, 5 boxes of plums and prunes, 15 boxes of pears, 25 bushels of apples, a wagon load of squash and pumpkins, besides onions, potatoes, sugar beets and other products of the farm.

HORACE PEERY LAID AT REST IN THE CITY CEMETERY

Marked by eloquent speaking, beautiful music and a large gathering of friends and relatives, the funeral services for Horace Peery were held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Second ward meeting house. Bishop Robert McQuarrie officiated.

Previous to the services at the meeting house, many visited the home of the mother, Mrs. D. H. Peery, 2431 Adams avenue, where the body was. Besides the many relatives there were many friends of the family from Salt Lake and various parts of the state as well as some from California. After brief services at the home the casket was removed to the meeting house. In the cortege from the house to the chapel, two carryalls were required for the transportation of the beautiful floral offerings.

Later Hinchcliff played an organ prelude as the casket was borne into the meeting house by the friends who acted as pall bearers. The bearers were Charles Humphries, Joseph Seowcroft, Thomas Burt, R. A. Hoag, Chris Flygare, John Taylor, Lester Higginbotham and Theodore Schanzenbach.

When the members of the family were seated near the front, the invocation was offered.

The speakers were Harry Joseph of Salt Lake, T. Samuel Browning, President C. F. Middleton, Bishop Robert McQuarrie, and James H. Douglas.

As an old friend of the family, as well as a friend of Horace Peery, Mr. Joseph was able to give several interesting incidents.

Mr. Browning and President Middleton had also known the deceased well during his residence in the Second ward. Bishop McQuarrie and Mr. Douglas paid eloquent tributes of respect.

George Douglass gave a solo, "Softly and Tenderly," Miss Elsie Shorten sang "The Link Divine," and Albert Erickson played a violin obligato, accompanying the singer. "O, My Father," was given by Walter Stephens and the closing number was "Good Night" by Miss Josephine Shorten. After the invocation, the services were opened with the quartet, "My Father Knows," by George Douglass, Walter Stephens, Elsie Shorten and Rhea Stephens.

The interment was in the Peery plot in the city cemetery.

MASSAGE AND CURATIVE AID

However, fractures cause but a small part of a crippled one sees. There joints stiffened and gnarled by rheumatism, gout, rheumatoid, arthritis, and by gonorrheal infections.

There are also flabby and weakened muscles. They may result from infantile paralysis, locomotor ataxia, and other forms of paralysis and disuse. These conditions distort the human machinery, getting it out of balance.

"I am all crippled up with rheumatism," is an expression as familiar as a household word. Why are you so? The reason is to be found usually in the fact that you have not completed the treatment.

A man comes down with rheumatism; he sends for physician; the physician prescribes for him, and he gets better. His pain subsides, and he goes back to work.

That is not enough. The use of the salicylates will relieve the pain all right; they make more bearable; they may limit the damage which the infection otherwise would have done, but they do not effect the cure.

In acute rheumatism the joint is infected. The germs which cause the rheumatism go into the blood stream through some parts of the body, such as the tonsils.

In the treatment of the disease, then, regard should be had not only for the relief of pain, but finding the port of entry of the germs which causes it and putting and keeping it in order.

Rheumatism, though, does more than cause pain. Being an infection, it may be a sufficient degree to cause the bones and the joints to grow together, resulting in stiffness. If it does not reach this degree of damage, it causes injury to delicate and important structures of the joint.

As a result of the injury there may be a creaking, popping sound, besides more or less pain when using the joint in after years.

Treatment of rheumatism then should have in view not only relief of pain and control of the gateway of infection, but the correction of damage done to structures that have suffered from the rheumatic attack.

This can be done in two years, by
